Security at Dispensing Doctors

Despite current crime trends the need for sophisticated accredited crime prevention measures is often overlooked or ignored.

Practices will no doubt want to protect assets, in particular pharmaceutical stock, from the increasing threat of burglary, theft and fraud. Indeed, some assert the impact of the credit crunch' will only accelerate this unwelcome trend towards dishonesty?

Surelines Ltd are pleased to announce a new working partnership with Goodman Bentley who have recently entered the healthcare market after many years of experience working with the security services, the police and military organisations. They specialise in assessment and upgrade of existing systems and new installations for new build projects. Their deep understanding of criminal method and evidential requirements, especially in relation to image quality are of great value.

protect assets, in particular pharmaceutical stock, from the increasing threat of burglary, theft and fraud

The systems and services on offer include:

- Risk assessment of current security status
- Buildings alarm for burglary and/or fire
- Internal/External security during or outside working hours or both
- Personal 'attack' alarm
- Still or video image capture of evidential quality, which can be free running or 'incident triggered' and can be totally covert if required

Surelines will be negotiating a suitable discount for practices and will seek to develop a benchmark standard for installations and service offerings which surpass current readily available solutions.
