Kathleen Allan, a dispenser from Northumberland, recently trialled the device and has provided Dispex with the following feedback:-

Having a device has cut dispensing time of MDS prescriptions by approximately 50%, therefore reducing the cost and freeing up valuable time. Belford Medical Practice dispenses over 850 tablets/capsules per week into Nomad Clear medication packs from Dispex.

Volume popping of tablets and capsules by hand used to cause skin to crack and bleed and considerable discomfort -these symptoms are reduced significantly by using the device. If you follow the operating instructions i.e. (It is suggested that Dispensing technicians initially practice the technique by utilising 'out of date' stock) this is the key to success.

The Dispensing Team at Belford are so impressed with the device that they would highly recommend it to their fellow dispensers. The device is not inexpensive but will certainly save time – and therefore money – and reduce injuries to staff.

The Poppitts device will pay for itself in a very short time and is a very welcome aid to this very lucrative but time-consuming area of Dispensing.
